COMMENTS FROM THE TOWN MANAGER'S OFFICE

I received some information in the mail this week that deals with "Medicare" or Health Insurance for the aged. There is a brief explanation of the program and it tells what anyone should do to get more detailed information and applications. Anyone who has any questions about the program should call or write the Social Security Office, 536 Lisbon Street, Lewiston. If I can be of any assistance to anyone I will be glad to do anything that I can. Any questions regarding applications or eligibility should be directed to the Social Security office.

I also received a set of preliminary plans for the Route 2 project on Bridge Street and new bridge over the Androscoggin. There is a letter with the plans that explains the extent to which the plans can be used. The plans are in the Town Office and can be seen by interested parties. I might add that about all the plans contain are the existing features and the proposed location for the new bridge.

The highway crew will start the improvements on the airport this week. There is a limited amount of money available but there is enough to do some grading of the slopes on the edge of the strip. The town meeting in March appropriated $500 and authorized the transfer of the excise tax collected on planes for use in improvements to the strip. Some fill will be hauled in to level up the west end of the strip. There are places where the slopes will be cut down so that the slope will be flat enough for an air plane to go up over if the pilot should lose control. The excess that is cut from the high slopes will be put on other slopes that drop at a rate that is too steep for a plane to go down over.

BIBLE STUDY GROUP BEING FORMED

A Bible study group is being formed for a five week course on the gospel of Mark, Dec. 1, 7:45 to 8:45, at the Methodist Church Annex.

It has been quoted, "I prayed for Faith and thought that some day Faith would come down and strike like lightning. But Faith did not come."

"One day I read Romans 10:17. 'Now Faith cometh by hearing and hearing by the Word of God.' I had closed my Bible and prayed for Faith. I now opened my Bible and began to study, and Faith has been growing ever since."

All are cordially invited. Contact Richard Blake or Judy Webster for further information.

GOULD SPORTS' TEAMS HONORED AT BANQUET

Training diets were forgotten as members of Gould Academy's hardworking football and cross-country teams were guests at a banquet in their honor Saturday night at the West Parish Congregational Church. The Greater Bethel Chamber of Commerce were the hosts for the occasion with Norris Brown managing the kitchen operations, serving a spaghetti supper.

Except for the nervousness of captains Michael Chretien of the football team, and Vaughn Damme, of the cross country squad, a good time was had by all. Mike and Jake weren't sure, until the last minute, whether they would have to help with the speech-making.

The speeches were kept to a minimum—everyone, sooner or later during the season which brought home a few trophies, had exercised his vocal chords. James Fiske, vice president of the Chamber was toastmaster.

It was the pleasure of the Chamber to confer on coaches, Roger Scott, and Frank A. Vent, Jr., its Certificate of Merit, which has been awarded for outstanding for signal occasions of bringing honor to the area.

Chuckles of the evening came when Coach Scott told of the criticism one of the local newspapers of a rival team's town had to make about his ability to size up a football team.

It is well remembered that Scott faced the season with strong doubts, but ended it happy to discover that he had a team which could make him seem a poor judge.

In receiving his certificate as a man "behind the team," Vent said it was literally true, as he found out on one occasion when he tried to run with his pack.

And, last, but not least, while other Chamber bands put away the last of the dishes, Fiske introduced a "pre-recorded" film as the brief entertainment of the evening. It was the Gould-Mexico game as filmed by Mexican people, and somehow, technical difficulties occurred as Fiske started the reel line.

S. A. D. 44 BOND ISSUE VOTE DUE IN JANUARY

One hundred residents in S. A. D. 44 have been given a double edged challenge: as District directors set up the month of January for a referendum on the high school bond issue.

The Educational Advisory Committee of 100 is one of the tools recommended by Dr. Nicholas L. Engelhardt, president of the educational consulting firm of Engelhardt, Engelhardt, and Leggett, Furdy Station, N. Y., to help the five town district achieve most nearly, the type of secondary school program, and school property, that the majority want, and will support.

One of his first recommendations to the district, that needs a district secondary school by September, 1967, was to keep the people informed, and keep informed by the people.

Engelhardt suggested that the Committee of 100 have approximately one representative per 50 people throughout the District.

Wednesday, Nov. 17, was the first full official organizational meeting of the Committee. They will meet Wednesday nights following regular meetings of directors on the first and third Monday of each month.

The directors from each town have each appointed two representatives to serve on a steering committee within the "100". Chairman of the steering committee is Harry Swan Jr. of Locke Mills. Other members of the steering committee present at the meeting were: Wendell Twitchell, Owen Morgan, Mrs. Archie Young Jr., and Norris Brown.

Dexter M. Stowell, district chairman, outlined the purpose of the Committee of 100 as follows: to help directors determine the kind of high school program the community will support, to assist directors with a public relations program to obtain a favorable vote on the new high school bond issue; report to the district directors any recommendation of the Educational Advisory Committee; to attend meetings of directors and directors' sub-committees and inform the Committee of 100 of matters concerning the new high school.

The curriculum, submitted by Richard Melville, calls for a six year grades 7 through 12 program. The curriculum adopted will shape the school to be built. As later committees reported, the long range economy and continued on Page Four

20 SECONDS WITH THE NAZARENE

When Phillips Brooks met Helen Keller, who later became the miracle of her generation, he was asked to convey to this deaf and blind mute the love of God. It took considerable time before he was able to bridge the handicaps that separated them, but suddenly the light of understanding crossed her face, and she signaled back to him, "I always knew there was a God, but didn't know His name."—Kermit R. Olsen in "The Magnitude of Prayer" (Fleming H. Revell Co.)

THE UNKNOWN SHAPER

"That's the new school!" is a prideful remark that almost all Americans can make in showing off their communities. In thousands of cases, the shape, size and equipment of the new building was everything to the little-known profession of school consulting. The best-known of the consultants is Nicholas La Englehardt, 58, a nervous, gruffly warm expert whose firm, the busiest in the nation, has helped 400 school boards mold the down-to-earth terms of education for millions of kids.

Englehardt tries to keep boards from underbuilding or overbuilding, from going overboard for fads or neglecting useful innovation. He is often the broker between ambitious school administrators and hard-headed board members, or between visionary boards and a skeptical public. Generally, the test of his adjudication comes when taxpayers vote on a bond issue, he does not get his full 5% unless the issue passes and plans are approved. Working nationwide out of a one-story rural headquarters in tiny Parry Station, N. Y., his firm of Englehardt, Englehardt and Leggett now proposes some $350 million in school construction each year, compared with $147 million ten years ago. It wins about 95% of the elections on which it is consulted.

The firm's success arises from thorough planning and from choosing what Michigan State Education Professor Donald Lea terms "parachute survivors," in which a consultant "drops in, studies the situation, and runs like hell." Englehardt sticks around to face all the local pressures, averages four nights a week on some school stage patiently explaining his proposals. He pins down his argument with facts, rarely retreats. When a woman at a Cape Cod meeting demanded to know what the alternatives to Englehardt's plans were, he replied dryly, "A second rate school system."

Englehardt welcomes every question. "It's the people who don't come to the meetings that concern me," he says. Once he pleaded door-to-door in rural New Hampshire to explain his plans in living rooms. Recently he helped persuade residents of Greenwich, Conn., that they could afford a new high school costing $11,400,000. Even Indiana's less affluent Lawrence Township approved Englehardt's $5,000,000 high school. "It's air-conditioned and has a swimming pool, yet we didn't have any trouble at all," boasts Superintendent Edwin Estell.

Englehardt's late father, an education professor, helped create one of the nation's first educational-consultant organizations at Columbia Teachers' College in 1917. He set up a private operation in 1947 with his son Dick and Stanley Leggett, a Ph.D. in education from Columbia. Nick had studied engineering at Yale, worked as a planner for Architect Wallace Harrison and earned a Ph.D. in educational administration at Columbia.

Englehardt looks at innovation with a cold eye. "There are an awful lot of people in education who feel change is necessary for change's sake," he says. "Changes that he does back are from teaching, mechanical language labs, individualized study carrels, large lecture classrooms in combination with small seminar rooms — and so on."

Englehardt believes his influence. "Don't forget, you're going to make all the decisions," he tells his audiences. Yet he concedes that his quiet campaign to locate a Charlotte, N. C., school between white and Negro neighborhoods as "the best" was helped along by a newspaper. He grouped shops, law firms and home arts facilities in a new school, N. Y., high equalization of educational opportunity was pointed out. The Englehardt firm has projected a space requirement list for a 750 pupils, six-year program, allowing 150 square feet per pupil, at a cost of $20 per square foot. In presenting this data for the finance committee, Stowell said $2,250,000 for final costs ready to operate on the curriculum outlined would not seem unreasonable for 1967 — the average cost per square foot cost for 1964 being $17.05.

It was reported that a four-year, grades 9 to 12 building would require approximately 180 square feet per pupil to conduct the same program, or about $1,800,000. Taking out one third of the pupils would not reduce the costs one third, since many square feet are involved for services, and extra educational facilities that, under the six-year program, would be used by 250 more pupils.

Meanwhile, as pointed out by property chairman, Milton Mills, the four-year program would not alleviate pressure on present buildings as much as their condition requires. New construction on the elementary level would be needed. Plus, the broader, and more equally presented program felt necessary for junior high would be more economical with the proposed six-year facility and single facility.

Such matters as water and sewage facilities at the site the directors have chosen; type of lockers advisable for girls; centralization of hot lunch program; size of gymnasium; combination of multi-purpose rooms, were discussed.

It was indicated that how the cost would affect the tax rate should become better known between now and next month.

school around a common foyer with glass walls, which led the three teachers to note duplication and initiate a combined "family arts" course. The installation of waist-level windows in the corridors of an Indiana school did wonder for pupils' discipline; the principal could walk the halls, spot any disorder.

More or less in the pattern set by Englehardt's father, about 200 school consultants practice in the U. S. today. Their mission, in Englehardt's quiet definition, is to "keep people from making simple mistakes."

NEW BETHEL MISSION CHOR STARTS SUNDAY

All students attending St. Athanasius Bethel Mission are invited to join the new church choir in preparation for the approaching Christmas season. The first rehearsal will be held on Sunday, after the 9:00 a. m. mass. It is hopefully anticipated that the parents, particularly those in the outlying areas will cooperate in allowing their children to participate in this very worthwhile endeavor.

Mrs. Fernand Favreau, an experienced vocalist and instructor, will be the choir director, and Mrs. Frank Vogt, Sr., will serve as pianist. Both Mrs. Favreau and Mrs. Vogt have expressed a genuine interest in this project and have graciously volunteered their services.

It is hoped that this choir will become a regular part of Sunday services long after the Christmas season is over.

MORE CAUTION URGED BY STATE POLICE Col. Robert Marx joined Gov. Reed and Chairman Jack Atwood of the Maine Highway Safety Committee in a plea for extra caution over the Thanksgiving holiday, saying:

"Certainly, there should be no question in anyone's mind concerning the necessity for great care on our streets and highways at all times. A major holiday simply serves to underscore this necessity."

"The acceptance of individual responsibility behind the wheel and walking in traffic is an absolute 'must.' Enforcement officials and safety organizations must meet their obligations to the best of their ability, but without conscientious strict observance of the law and of common sense safety rules, by those who drive and walk in traffic, the traffic toll will continue to soar. Please walk and drive with great care."

SUNDAY RIVER

— Mrs. R. M. Fleet, Cor. —

Ernest Verrill and doctor friend and son of Concord, Mass., was in town the last of the week hunting and went back Sunday with no game.

The hunters at Mrs. Mary Morin's have returned home with two coons and some deer.

Enoch Foster of South Paris has been in town hunting and stayed at Stan Roberts' camp.

Little Tammy Fleet had the misfortune to fall up stairs and break her collar bone on the edge of the bottom step. So she is celebrating her second birthday today, Nov. 21, well strapped up.

A RED JACKET

Here is a safety precaution

for a pet that has white or tan color that might be mistaken by a hunter.

This dog is white with very large tan spots. All summer he has been in the woods every day with his master, Bryce Yates, staying in or near the bright colored lightning. Two happy men but wet and tired.

Yes, they still have big ones in Maine that don't always get away as it weighed in at 254 which means over 300 alive.

truck. But when hunting season came, he had to stay home the first few disappointing days until Mrs. Yates came up with this very bright red blanket which he wears very proudly. Then back into the woods he goes. His name is Blazer but is commonly called just plain Bo. He has a total of twelve coon to his credit this fall, even though he is a trained bobcat dog. He is a great friend of all the children. A game of ball is in progress in this photo. The children are left: Jeffrey Fleet, Darnita Yates about to take the ball and Edwick Yates on the ground in the right partly hidden.

There is also an all black dog of Mrs. Mary Morin with a bright blue collar around his neck.
